The High Cost of Fast-Food Researchers at Iowa State University in Ames gave 50 volunteers 90 grams of McDonald's hamburger plus 90 grams of white rice. They were told it was a study about the nutritional value of fast food. Twenty-eight of the volunteers ate both fast food and rice right away. Fifteen of the volunteers took 15 minutes before finishing the meal to fill out a questionnaire. The initial food intake resulted in a change in the amount of insulin in their blood. The initial amount of insulin was increased by two or more times and the number of insulin injections was increased by more than a half. Similar but smaller changes in the amount of insulin and in the amount of insulin needed to sustain hunger were detected in the volunteers who had given the fast food to their families at the same time. "The data reveal that, within a matter of minutes, consumption of the fast-food meal can increase the demand for insulin
