I don't think it is being denied that Venezuela is one of the maddest posses in history. But the bottom line is that the global community don't want another state like Libya or Iraq, so nothing is being done. It is simple. I mean the UN Security Council is too involved in the UN to be able to realize that Venezuela is not just a bunch of stonehead idiots. There have been reports that the country is even helping the militants behind the al Qa'eda affiliated group in Libya. If that is true, I don't think it is just some nut in the country, I think there is a concrete group out there backed by the government in Caracas. This is where the UN is involved. It is the same people who can't make up their mind on what to do in Libya that can't make a judgment about what is going on in Colombia. The UN doesn't want to put their people at risk, so they can't do anything but waiting. If they try to intervene, they risk having their own people blown up. I think that is the reason the UN is afraid to intervene. But that's my opinion. Bolivarianism is like spaghetti of the north. Not only it is a state but a state of mind. It is a culture. It is filled with its own ideology. It has its own humanitarian and religious outlook. It is not a choice but a destiny Occ13bf012

See other formats Soon after Singh became a professor at the Indian Institute of Technology, Delhi, IIT's performance hit the rocks. Because of the excessive control of the IITs by India's ministry of human resource development, the government was not satisfied with what it perceived as the poor quality of IITs. Manoj K. Gupta, who was the director of IIT Delhi, alleged that the ministry had forced the institute to take stringent steps to improve its performance, but these measures had caused the institute to lose momentum. The coming academic year saw the abrupt introduction of an "end of semester elimination", and as a result of the presence of students in the engineering courses, the academic year at the IITs ended early, with May and June academic holidays for the first time. The institute had also suddenly lost some of its most seasoned and experienced faculty. Even at a time when the IITs were ill-prepared for such a move, the infrastructure and institutional support at the institute were not adequate, according to Gupta. In a scathing attack on the Indian Institutes of Technology-Delhi, Gupta wrote: "We are sure that no one, including those who are presently residing in the institute, do not agree with what has been going on" [60]. This was followed by a letter to the vice president of India, A.P.J. Abdul Kalam, where Gupta referred to the continuation of the "exclusion" in the upcoming academic year.
